LIKE THE WAVES OF TIME PASSING, the sinuous, curving Memorial Wall is built on the historic Eagledale Ferry Dock landing site where the first of more than 120,000 Japanese Americans—two-thirds of them United States citizens were banished from their West Coast homes and placed in concentration camps during World War II.

ON MARCH 30, 1942, with only six days notice and only allowed to bring what they could carry or wear, 227 Bainbridge Island men, women and children were forcibly removed by U.S. Army soldiers. This was the first mass community to arrive at the Manzanar concentration camp in California, and later most were assigned to the last barracks at the Minidoka concentration camp in Idaho, becoming the emblematic bookends of the Japanese American incarceration story.

THE 276 FOOT-LONG MEMORIAL WALL

of old-growth red cedar, granite and basalt honors the names of all 276 Bainbridge Islanders of Japanese descent living on the Island at the start of WWII, and who were exiled from their homes by President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Executive Order 9066 and Civilian Exclusion Order No. 1. It also honors the unique legacy of a community that stood by its Japanese American friends and neighbors and welcomed them home. Five large terra cotta friezes along the Memorial Wall movingly illustrate this American story of perseverance, patriotism and courage.

THE DEPARTURE DECK stands at the exact location where Islanders approached the dock to board the ferry Kehloken, the start of an uncertain journey to their new home—unfinished barracks in the California desert.
